THE JEWETT-BAKER SHOW.

phant, or, rather a family of elephants, to their city. These elephants are now upon her hands and the hands of her draw. As a consequence, while on the one side loyalty to Boston traditions prompts them to applaud Miss Jewett's motives; on the other, considerations of discretion.

Again, in the last few years, consciously or unconsciously, the mental horizon of Boston has broadened, and the Boston mind has been brought, all things considered, to an encouraging state of receptivity regarding the truth about the conditions in the South and the causes of these conditions. The Boston papers can no longer shut out from their inner consciousness the fact that practically all the woes the colored brother at the South has suffered can be traced to the influence of the Republican party over the negro, and the acts of that party in endeavoring to use the negro to humiliate the whites of this section. The appointment of Baker to a postmastership was one of the most outrageous of these acts, and the blood of Baker rests upon the head of the administration. This our Boston contemporaries virtually admit, but the admission comes out in an agonizing see-sawing effort to avoid "heresy," yet at the same time show progress in doing the South justice, which is ludicrous to behold.

However, as we have said, the increased receptivity of the Boston mind as regards the truth about the South is, all things considered, encouraging. Therefore, we trust that our Boston contemporaries will not question our sincerity when we tell them that, although we cannot repress a smile over their struggle, we fully appreciate the awkwardness and seriousness of the fix the Jewett-Baker show has gotten them into.

HOW TO STOP LYXCHINGS.

The evident intent of the Alexandria negroes was to intimidate the white pop ulation. The white population of the South is universally kind and considerate to their colored neighbors as long as they are quiet and law-abiding. But as soon as they become aggressive and lawles or threatening they get hurt. The Alex andria lynching is greatly to be deplored. But it is easy to see that the rough ne-gro element precipitated it.—The Balti-

So they did. If the colored people wish to stop lynchings they would better follow our advice and take pains to show the world that they have no lot nor partno sympathy-with those members of their race who have put in terror so many southern women. It is not possible to devise any other equalty effective remedy for lynching. The negroes should come to the help of those who are trying to create in the South a different sentiment on the subject of lynching. If the blacks of Alexandria had pursued the right course there would have been no lynching there. They brought the mob down on the prisoner by exhibiting sympathy for him, not for the little child whom he had endeavored to entice; whose future he had

If they are not willing to do that much, they will have to take the consequences.

If the colored population of the South brought to bear some years ago against black Democrats, it would be seldom heard of. As it is, it is the big, brutal, lustful offender who gets the sympathy, while the poor victim upon whose life Above rates are for "every day," or ad- gets none, or next to none, from them. Whether, however, Dewey was guilty of the indiscretion or not, the Kaiser's action and remark are significant. It is safe to say, we think, that they show that the Kaiser, in expressing, as he has done on several occasions lately, a desire for failure of Boston to sympathize with friendship between the two countries was entirely sincere.

NORTH STATE COTTON-MILLS.

Interesting Statistics - Midsummer Crop Report.

RALEIGH, N. C., August 11.-(Special.)-To-day the Agricultural Department completed its annual report of cotten mills in North Carolina. It shows that there are 206 of these; also, thirteen hosiery and four knitting mills, and one towel and one cotton-goods finishing mill. Gaston county leads with twenty-two cotton mills. Alamance ranking second with nineteen, and Mecklenburg with thirteen, and Randolph and Richmond come fourth with twelve. There are cotton mills in forty-three of the ninety-seven counties. Eight counties have over twelve mills each. The State Agricultural Department issued to-day its midsummer crop report, based on returns from over twelve hundred correspondents. It gives the present condition of cotton as 85, and the damage since the July report as 15 per cent. The condition of tobacco is 101, and of corn 85.

been released from a term in jall. Though the arrest wes only made on suspicion, the was quickly established that two robberies had been committed by Mitchell while going about begging alms, and that Sergeant Donahue himself was the victim of one of them. The negro went to the Sergeant's house during his absence and requested Mrs. Donahue to address a letter for her. While she was doing this the negro slipped into another room and stole a fine pistol belonging to the officer, which was identified. Subsequently Mitchell was seen to enter the law office of Major F. R. Lassiter. The Major had just stepped out a moment, but in the pocket of his vest, which was hanging on the wall, he had left a $20 note, which Mitchell found and appropriated. Nearly all of this money was recovered.

THE ATLANTIC AND DANVILLE,

The Southern Will Control It-Forger Convicted.

NORFOLK, VA., August 11.-(Special.)-As intimated in these columns yesterday, the latest rumor of the transfer of the Atlantic and Danville railway to the Southern system is true. The officials of neither system are in position to talk, but the fact is that negotiations, which have been in progress for some time past, have been consummated, and the Atlantic and Danville will this fall become an integral part of the Southern railway system under the same terms that dozens of other lines are operated by that company—that is, under a lease for a long term of years. The Southern's trains will probably run over the newly-acquired line to Pinner's Point, where the Southern's own great terminals are located. This will probably abrogate the existing trackage arrangement between the Atlantic-Coast Line and the Southern railway, and the latter's Norfolk and Chattanooga express will be run via Danville instead of through Seima and Raieigh. It will not shorten the schedule materially, but will at least give the big Southern the advantage of reaching Norfolk over its own rails. Southern system is true. The officials of
